Lardner Entrains for Hub When Asked to Motor Over

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—Mr. Bud fisher, who draws the petcy and gaston cartoons, called up today and asked, "How are you going to Boston?"

"In good shape," was my apt answer.

"But listen," was his startling rejoinder, "I am going to drive up there Friday and I will have room for you in my car."

"That sounds fine," says I, and immediately went out and bought a sent on the train that leaves here at 1 p. m and gets to Boston at 6 o'clock that's what I think of Bud Fisher cartoons. Bud Fisher may be a nice guy and everything, but the day I ride anywhere with him and his car will be the day Brooklyn wips the world's series from Boston.

Betting is 0 to 0.

And spoaking of that, the world's greatest newspaper has probably been informed by its New York correspondent that there is a great deal of betting and the oids favor Boston, $ 10.5. Well, listen, as Bud Fisher says, I was up in John Doyle's billiard parlor today and John Boyle's billiard parlor today and John betting to the today to the betting to the today to the today to ipsofacto, or whatever it is crary they have not reached the stage where they will back their so-called ball club at odds of anything less than twenty-eight to one

So your correspondent will try to remember that for the rest of this remarkable story.

Your correspondent arose at 10 o'clock and answered the telephone and the man at the other end was Jerome Hern, who wrote most of the mustic to the Follies, and I can't say that fearlessly, but if we said sewrote the librato, he would sue the paper for a million dollars libel.

"Yes," said Mr. Hempstead, 'I am going to fire McGraw, and here are some other things I am going to do:
I am going to make the price of box I am going to make the price of box seats ten cents a piece, and I am going to play Schupp at third base on account of his left-handedness, and I am going to trade Zimmerman back to Chicago for Al Campion, and I am going to take the club to Medicine. In other words, the stories to the effect that McGraw is going to lose this job are nearly as true as the cones about Brooklyn backing its hall club at odds of eight to five.
